

Marsha Cheddi is a Team Leader at the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) Secretariat. She is leading a team in the Sustainable Development Mechanisms (SDM) Programme. The Programme is mainly focused on supporting the Clean Development Mechanism (CDM) and Joint Implementation (JI). Marsha has contributed to the development and implementation of standards for the CDM and is also working in the areas of quality, project and risk management. Being a part of SDM Management Committee, she works with senior management on strategic and operational matters, including developing and implementing the business and management plans of the regulatory bodies that govern the CDM and JI: the CDM Executive Board and the JI Supervisory Committee.

Prior to joining the Secretariat, she worked at the Canadian Standards Association and was the secretary of ISO TC 207/SC 7 on Greenhouse gas management and related activities. In the past, she has also worked at Deloitte as a member of the Sustainability Services Team in Enterprise Risk Services, and at ICF International on matters related to private sector greenhouse gas inventories and climate change issues.

Academically, she studied Environmental Studies and Sustainable Development at the University of Toronto (Canada), and the University of Surrey (U.K.).
